INTRODUCTION

The Persons with disabilities constitute a significant section of our population whose potentialities need to be utilized to the maximum. However, in practice, due to prejudices prevailing in the society that

- (i) Persons with disabilities are incapable to earn of his own and, therefore, is dependent on others for his livelihood and
- (ii) The persons with disabilities are born in a family due to some wrong done by the parents in their past birth or life etc. etc. As such a great deal of resistance has to be overcome before placing them in gainful employment.

As per the countrywide sample survey conducted by National Sample Survey Organization in 1991, about 16 million physically disabled persons in India are suffering from visual/ speech/ hearing/ locomotor disabilities.

Several initiatives have been taken by the government to mainstream the disabled and rehabilitate them as well as provide opportunities to contribute to national life as well. The word "Rehabilitation" is an all-inclusive term. It is a process that covers medical or physical restoration, relevant therapy, training, job placement and evaluation based on the new outcome of research that took place in the area of medical and social sciences.

A large variety of methods are used to achieve the objective viz. survey, medication, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, fitting of artificial limbs, use of aids or appliances, etc. The process of rehabilitation has psychosocial inputs as well. In other words, rehabilitation is a challenge to the resources of medical and social sciences and responsibility to be shared and discharged jointly by all the sections of the Society.

One of the greatest challenges faced by rehabilitation programmes in India is how to deliver effective service at minimum cost covering large number of available handicapped.

Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment has, therefore, started several Institutes, which have been functioning as premier apex level organisations in respective areas of disability. These Institutes work as catalysts in the areas of education, manpower development, research, training, development of suitable service models and has also been providing low cost rehabilitation aids and appliances to the handicapped.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Centres for the Handicapped under Directorate General of Employment and Training of Ministry of Labour have been established to assess their residual capacity for the work, to train them accordingly and place them in the gainful employment (Ref. Appendix 'A').

There are at present 17 Vocational Rehabilitation Centres for Handicapped in 16 States. One of them, the one in Vadodara is exclusively for the women with disabilities. There are proposals to set up such Centres in all the States/UTs.

Majority of the State Governments have set up Special Employment Exchanges for Handicapped for providing them with vocational guidance, counseling and placement assistance in public sector employment. In addition, a few Employment Exchanges have also been strengthened with a special cell for the cause. The list of presently Special Employment Exchanges and Special Cells functioning in different parts of the country is enclosed at Appendix –A.

This book contains seven Chapters covering Legal Support, definition on disabilities, services available for the disabled, courses available in the delivery of services to the disabled. This booklet is expected to serve the requirements of the disabled and those who would like to enter the field of rehabilitation.

NATIONAL TRUST FOR THE WELFARE OF PERSONS WITH AUTISM, CEREBRAL PALSTY, MENTAL, REHABILITATION AND MULTIPLE DISABILITIES

The National Trust has come into being with effect from 31.12.1999 by an Act of Parliament. The Trust is a statutory body and primarily seeks to uphold the rights, safeguard the interests and promote the development of persons with Autism, Cerebral Palsy, Mental Retardation and Multiple Disability and their families. Towards this goal, the National Trust has formulated programmes that promote independence, facilitate guardianship where necessary and address the concerns of these special persons who do not have their family support. The Trust inter alia also protects the interests of the persons in the four above mentioned categories even after the death of their parents or guardians. The Trust is empowered to receive grants, donations, benefactions, bequests and transfers.

The Trust has launched an umbrella scheme named “Reach and Relief Scheme for the Welfare of Persons with Autism, Cerebral Palsy, Mental Retardation and Multiple Disabilities.” The scheme provides the following:-

- a) Long-term/Permanent Stay institution
- b) Day Care/Respite Centres.
 - i) Augmentation of home visit care giving.
 - ii) Training of care givers.

National Trust has also set up information centres in different states and is creating awareness generation. It has translated the Act into different languages and has developed material on prevention of these disabilities and rehabilitation of these categories of disabled persons in regional languages.

The National Trust already has a corpus of Rs.99 Crores and uses income earned from this corpus to fund its activities. They have set up more than 250 Local Level Committees at the district level and set up 12 information centres in different states. They have also registered voluntary organizations working for persons with Autism, Cerebral Palsy, Mental Retardation and Multiple Disabilities.
